EDDISON DAY CLUB 20th BIRTHDAY PARTY ON FRIDAY 8 MARCH

To all Members of the Woden Valley RSL Sub-Branch

I am heading to Thailand from 24th March to 9th April.

I will be visiting the Thailand end of the infamous "Death Railway" known as the Burma-Thailand Railway and Kanchanaburi CWG Cemetery, where two cousins on my Mother's side of the family are buried.

I was hoping to visit Thanbyuzayat CWG Cemetery in Burma, where two more cousins are buried, but have been advised that it is too dangerous.

If any Woden RSL Members know of any Australian or British families who have relatives who are buried at Kanchanaburi, let me know the name of the serviceman and I will place a Poppy and take a photo of the grave.

RSL Australia Condemns Vandalisation of Vietnam War Memorial

The Returned & Services League of Australia (RSL) has strongly condemned the vandalism of the Vietnam War Memorial in Canberra.

Overnight, vandals painted graffiti on the Vietnam War Memorial on Anzac Parade in an apparent protest to highlight the situation in Gaza.

RSL National President Greg Melick said the vandalism would be deplored by all fair-minded Australians.

"People are entitled to protest, but the desecration of a memorial to those who served, suffered and died in the Vietnam conflict is to be deplored," Greg Melick said.

"The protesters should have chosen another way to get their message across.

"The brave Australian service personnel who served in Vietnam had nothing to do with the current conflict in Gaza and to use their memorial as a platform to protest is contemptible.

"On behalf of the RSL and all who have served and continue to serve our nation, we condemn the actions of the protesters."

Greg Melick said the desecration of the memorial did nothing to enhance the cause of those suffering in the Middle East.

The Families of Veterans Guild will continue the mission started 78 years ago in NSW; to improve the lives of the families of veterans in Australia.

Why change the name?

Because we know the families of our veterans need an organisation that focuses on all of them, that fills eligibility gaps and that spans full spectrum of Defence service, from recruitment, transition, and life after service.

Who does the Families of Veterans Guild support?

All defence and veteran families in Australia are welcome within our organisation. Regardless of whether their veteran is currently serving or has previously served, our priority is to support the emotional and social wellbeing of their family. We help them navigate the highs and lows of their journey in a safe and supportive environment and provide programs that address wellbeing needs.

What does the Guild offer to families?

A one-stop shop for information, referrals, service connections, community, and advice. They gain access to the provision of services and service navigation support to reduce the mental and emotional load they may carry. We provide a community of peers, offering understanding and support when needed most. We also provide veteran family members an opportunity to participate in advocacy efforts to have the community's needs met, and their contributions and sacrifices recognised.

What value does the Guild add to the veteran sector?

The organisation will provide assistance via referrals to programs, services, and other support organisations where it will help the family member. For example, we frequently refer members & families on claims advocacy and financial assistance for bereaved families to Legacy, emotional regulation workshops and employment services to RSL and RSL Lifecare, and national advocacy on War Widow entitlements through to Australian War Widows Inc.

How does the Guild work with the Australian Government?

We are a trusted, intelligent, and informed voice and advisor on matters relating to defence and veteran families. The Families of Veterans' Guild provides a referral point for these families, helping them to navigate the service system and supporting families through challenges. As an organisation with growing connections directly within the veteran family community, we can help government 'take the pulse' of our community on initiatives and ideas affecting veterans and their families and provide relevant and timely feedback to help shape those initiatives.

What can the Guild offer other advocates for veterans & families?

Our organisation now spans the full spectrum of Defence service, through all stages of the lifecycle of a veteran - from recruitment, transition, and life after service. The Families of Veterans' Guild can provide a broad perspective to assist with targeted advocacy campaigns and initiatives, and can help amplify issues, unite around critical causes, and be a strong and determined voice on behalf of defence and veteran families. We regularly provide advice to other organisations when required as part of our pursuit of a common goal - improving the lives of Australian veterans and their families.

What makes the Guild unique?

It is Australia's first organisation that unites all defence and veteran families under one banner with one simple eligibility criteria - members must be the family member of a veteran. All members of the Families of Veterans Guild will have no restrictions in accessing a growing platform of services that target the emotional and social wellbeing of families, specialist case management, and social work services for those in need of more targeted assistance.

OUR MISSION: provide the defence and veteran family community with a voice, facilitate access to services, entitlements; and support their social and emotional wellbeing.

Sufferings of War and Service

For Every Drop Shed in Anguish, a new sculpture recognising and commemorating the suffering caused by war and military service, was dedicated at a public ceremony on 22 February 2024.

The Australian War Memorial has worked with veterans and their families and advocates to commission this work of art, which represents those affected by operations and during training; in war and on peacetime service.

Created by artist Alex Seton, For Every Drop Shed in Anguish will provide a place at the Memorial for those who have experienced and witnessed the ongoing trauma that can result from service, and for Memorial visitors to reflect on this experience.

“Every droplet has a unique shape, defined by its delicate surface tension, as if about to burst. Their rounded liquid forms suggest blood, sweat or tears — for every drop ever shed in anguish. Most importantly, when touched these forms reveal themselves to have an inner strength and resilience that provides hope and promise of healing.” - Alex Seton, artist

Ben Farinazzo

Ben Farinazzo: Ambassador | Advocate | Speaker

A proud Australian with Italian and Aboriginal heritage, Ben's journey from serving in the Australian Army to overcoming seemingly insurmountable challenges is a testament to the strength and resilience of the human spirit. He battled posttraumatic stress disorder, depression, anxiety, and a broken neck and back, to represent Australia in indoor rowing and powerlifting at the Invictus Games Sydney 2018, winning two gold medals.

Ben is an Australia Day ambassador, advocate and speaker for several national charities and organisations to help improve the mental health and wellbeing of Australians, particularly our veterans. He uses his journey to shine a light of hope on those who are still experiencing times of darkness.

At the core of his journey is his family: his wife and three children, who are his pillars of love, strength, and support.

Ben's Dedication Ceremony Speech

Introduction

Good morning. Thank you for the opportunity to share these words on behalf of our committee. Before I begin, we would like to recognise our strong and resilient veteran community, whilst also acknowledging that there are those among us suffering the physical and psychological impact of war and service. We would like to thank Alex Seton for this meaningful sculpture, the first of its kind at the Australian War Memorial. We would also like to acknowledge a special group of people who have shared this journey with us, every step of the way – without their dedication, compassion and support we would not be here – please join me in thanking the team at the Australian War Memorial.

We will remember them. Yet many feel forgotten.

Here at the heart of the Australian War Memorial we remember those who have fallen. The Roll of Honour consists of a long series of bronze panels recording the names of over 103,000 members of the Australian armed forces who have died during, or as a result of, their service.

Attention is rightly given to those who died during war. However, there are many who survived and are left suffering from physical and psychological wounds, and there are many that also have seen and unseen wounds as a result of their service. Many have not been acknowledged and many have felt forgotten.

There are those who suffer physical wounds. Those who have served and wear pins, not only on their chests but in their knees, shoulders, and backs. From jumping in and out of vehicles, ships, subs and aircraft, to lifting and lugging equipment, to being shot at, blown up or smashed up in some bloody accident. Those with ringing ears, choking chests, missing limbs, acquired brain injuries, strokes, broken bones and blown-up bodies. Living with the knowledge that many of these 'scars' will serve as constant reminders of discomfort, disfigurement, and pain.

We acknowledge you. This sculpture serves to remind us that you are not forgotten. There are those who suffer psychological wounds. Those who have served and carry not only packs but anguish, trauma, incessant nightmares, panic attacks, anxiety, depression, and Post Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD). Labels for unseen injuries, that when left untreated can spread like cancer consuming the mind, tearing apart relationships, and destroying lives.

Many have found ways to reclaim their lives but will remain forever changed. Many have battled shame and guilt to seek help, only to be turned away and left feeling as though they have been tossed to the curb and abandoned, not only by those that they served with, but by the country that they fought for.

Tragically, some after carrying the suffering of war and service way too long, way too far – having fought a good fight – have died by suicide. This is a national disaster and in many cases could have been prevented. We as a committee, acknowledge the efforts of those to bring about much-needed change, knowing that it will never bring back our children, our loved ones, or our mates. There is still so much more that needs to be done.

We acknowledge you. This sculpture serves to remind us that you are not forgotten.

These dew-like marble droplets, spread across these green waves reminds us of the ripple effect on families, carers, loved ones, friends – our kids – and the profound impact on our communities, our country and future generations.

Those who check on their friends and loved ones daily, making sure that they have showered and eaten.

Those who reach out to friends because they have reached wit's end and don't know what to do anymore.

Those who just need a space to cry and cry and cry so that they can then wipe back the tears, step back into the house, and get ready for dinner.

To all of you who have tried, and tried, and tried – and nothing seems to work – and you feel empty and alone having lost that loved one forever.

We acknowledge you all. Every single one of you and this sculpture serves to remind us that you and them are not forgotten.

For some this sculpture represents a place to grieve and a timeless reminder of the long-term cost of war and service.

For some the stunning white and red veins of iron ore reflect their journey of blood, sweat and tears and a place of peace, solitude, and reflection.

For some touching these beautiful droplets of discarded marble reveals an inner strength, a resilience, and the gleaming light off the surface surrounded by trees and singing birds brings with it a promise of hope and healing.

Conclusion

Let me conclude by saying, we acknowledge that everyone's life experience is different and that everyone moves through the suffering of war and service in their own way, at their own pace.

We have learnt that the blood, sweat, and tears shed by those who have served, and their loved ones is best done with the support, recognition and embrace of the community.

Whereas in the past there was no place for acknowledgement, no place for our community, us, to come together to recognise the sufferings of war and service – we are grateful that we now have this new sculpture aptly titled 'For Every Drop Shed in Anguish' to bring our community closer together.

A place and sculpture that serves to remind us that we, our families, our loved ones, our friends, and our mates are not forgotten.

Hearing Services Program Survey

The Department of Health and Aged Care administers the Australian Government Hearing Services Program. The program provides subsidised high-quality hearing services and devices to eligible Australians.

We want to hear from you

The program has been delivering hearing services for over 20 years. We are reviewing and exploring ways the program can be improved, to make it better for you and simpler for providers.

If you receive subsidised hearing services, we have created an online survey to get your feedback on possible changes to these services.

Timing

The survey will open on 19 February 2024 and close on 1 April 2024.

It will take approximately 15 minutes to complete and your responses will help inform this review.
